

We are now easier to reach in Liverpool and Tyne Tees

If you are familiar with our flag, then you will appreciate what it stands for.
But if not, perhaps we should get acquainted.

The Charity & Taylor flag belongs to a business service started by two marine electronics engineers nearly 50 years ago in Great Yarmouth.

The business has grown quite a bit since then and, in recent years become part of Aage Hempel, an international group, which has given us strength in depth by providing our know-how with greater resources and global facilities.

Customer Powered

We are always powered by our customer's needs, by supplying, servicing and supporting almost all major makes and types of navigational and communications equipment, and more.

We are also familiar with virtually all marine business sectors. Whatever your trade, we aim to help you keep your vessels and your business on the move

Quality Driven

We work and apply our trade locally and aim to be available at quaysides across the UK, with sales and services centres and engineers from Scotland to Cornwall.

If a radar stops turning, an ECDIS fails or you just need a radio survey you will need and expect a speedy response. Yes, that's right, we are ready to hit the decks running to get out there 24/7, 356 days a year to help when you call. And you only need call once for action.

The real power of any service such as ours depends on the quality of the people who do the work. They don't just fix things, but make sure you have an effective solution. Their training, know-how and experience are there to help keep your vessel safe, operational and on the move.
